Jessup Participants and Alumni

Each year, students from more than 600 law schools in over 80 countries participate in the Jessup Competition. From Afghanistan to Zimbabwe, these students are the best and brightest young legal minds from their law schools and countries. The Jessup experience instills students with a valuable advantage in the global marketplace by exposing them to complex, timely issues of international concern. Moreover, students develop strong teamwork, legal research, and oral and written advocacy skills by representing both sides of the case from start to finish in a rigorous and competitive environment. Jessup alumni commonly refer to the Competition as their most challenging and rewarding law school experience, and often point to the Jessup as the academic exercise that best prepared them to work in the international legal arena. It is no surprise then that many former Jessup competitors are now leaders in law, business, and government in institutions around the world.

Each of the 600 Jessup teams that compete each year are composed of two to five students from the same academic institution. More than 130 of these teams advance from the National and Regional Rounds of the Competition to the International Rounds held in Washington, D.C. As the world's largest and most expansive gathering of law students, the Jessup International Rounds give many participants their first exposure to student and attorney counterparts from other countries. Through spirited debate and socializing, Jessup competitors come to view their peers from around the world as allies, partners, and friends. Relationships between competitors remain strong even after the Competition has ended, and the "Friends of the Jessup" network of former competitors—thousands of individuals from around the world—continue to support the Jessup year after year as volunteer coaches, judges and mentors to the next generation of international lawyers.

Below is a chart that displays, by region, where Jessup students and alumni can be found worldwide. The chart includes teams that participated in the Jessup during at least one of the last three years, 2008-2010. Note that approximately 600 student teams are formed each year, though which schools decide to field a team changes year to year. Thus, a list of recent participant schools can be found on subsequent pages.
