ILW 2013

Welcome

The American Branch of the International Law Association (ABILA) and the International Law Students Association (ILSA) welcome you to the annual International Law Weekend (ILW) conference in New York City, an exciting event that brings together hundreds of practitioners, law professors, members of governmental and non-governmental organizations, and students. The theme of ILW 2013 is "Internationalization of Law and Legal Practice". More than 40 expert panels will examine how and why knowledge of international law is an increasingly relevant and important professional tool for virtually every lawyer. Panels may explore how international law principles and instruments are involved in such domestic areas as civil litigation, commercial transactions, trade regulation, family law, criminal prosecution, intellectual property, and dispute settlement.

ILW begins Thursday evening, October 24, with a distinguished opening panel at the House of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, 42 W. 44th Street. A reception sponsored by the Permanent Mission of Mexico to the United Nations will follow and is open to all conference attendees.

The conference continues Friday, October 25 and Saturday, October 26 at Fordham University School of Law, 140 West 62nd Street. Friday's activities feature a keynote address at Fordham University School of Law. This event is open to all conference attendees. A lunch, free and open to all conference attendees on a first-come, first-served basis, will be provided by the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice in the Platt Atrium at 12:30 pm.

A number of panels this year have been designated for mandatory continuing legal education credit (MCLE). The American Society of International Law (ASIL) has obtained accreditation for a maximum of 12 MCLE credits from California and Pennsylvania and is seeking accreditation from Virginia and New York. An attorney may also count these credits towards her or her New York CLE requirement credit through the Approved Jurisdiction policy without notifying the New York CLE Board. The attorney should simply include those credits when computing the total number of CLE credits completed, and keep the documentation for a period of at least four (4) years in case of audit. ABILA and ILSA are grateful to ASIL for undertaking the administrative processing of CLE credits.

On Friday evening, the Permanent Mission of the European Union to the United Nations, 666 Third Ave., 31st Floor, will host a reception for a limited number of conference attendees. If you are pre-registered for this event, please remember to bring photo identification and your conference badge. A nominal ABILA registration fee of $20 will be charged to confirm participation at the reception, which is being generously hosted by the Permanent Mission of the European Union to the United Nations. The ABILA registration fee will be applied to cover other costs of ILW. The support of the Permanent Mission of the European Union is greatly appreciated.

Saturday's events include more panels and afternoon meetings of ABILA and ILSA members. Those interested in joining ILSA or ABILA are invited to attend. The Saturday luncheon panels are $20 for those who order a boxed lunch. Without lunch, admission to Saturday luncheon panels is free.

Due to the generosity of co-sponsoring organizations, attendance at ILW is free for members of ABILA, ILSA, ABCNY and other co-sponsoring organizations, as well as staff of the United Nations and Permanent Missions to the United Nations, and students. For all others, there is a fee of $175.

After the ILW conference has ended, the ILSA Journal of International and Comparative Law publishes an issue of the Journal that contains many of the papers presented at International Law Weekend. This issue is titled "The International Practitioner's Notebook." Please email ilsa.journal.novasoutheastern@gmail.com to subscribe to the Journal or purchase this issue.

Opening Panel:

The International Arms Trade Treaty: Reducing Human Suffering Through Global Rules?

Earlier this year, the United Nations General Assembly approved the text of an Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) - to regulate the international transfer of conventional arms. The treaty would cover handguns, rifles and automatic weapons, as well as battle tanks, combat aircraft and warships. The ambition is to prevent weapons transfers that could lead to international crimes or human rights violations, and could end up in the black market of war lords, pirates and criminal gangs. Though more than 80 countries states have signed the treaty, the ATT has proven controversial. This opening panel for the International Law Weekend will feature a robust debate on the treaty from both the international and national perspectives.

Introduction and Moderator:

- Ruth Wedgwood, President, ABILA; Edward Burling Professor of International Law and Diplomacy, School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University

Panelists:

- Pablo Arrocha, Adviser to the Vice Minister of Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Mexico
- Steven Groves, Bernard and Barbara Lomas Senior Research Fellow, Margaret Thatcher Center for Freedom, Heritage Foundation

Big Data: The End of Privacy or a New Beginning?

Over the past few years, the volume of data collected and processed by business and government organizations has increased exponentially. This trend, called "Big Data", is driven by reduced costs of storing information and moving it around in conjunction with increased capacity to instantly analyze massive troves of unstructured data by using modern analytics methods and large-scale statistical simulations. The extraordinary benefits of Big Data are tempered by concerns over privacy and data protection. Privacy advocates are concerned that the advances of the data economy will upend the power relationships between government, business and individuals, and lead to profiling, discrimination and other restricted freedoms. This panel will explore the benefits and costs of Big Data and proposals for regulatory reform.

Moderator:

- Omer Tene, Vice President of Research, International Association of Privacy Professionals

Panelists:

- Britton Guerrina, Deputy Global General Counsel, PricewaterhouseCoopers International Limited
- Boris Segalis, Partner, InfoLawGroup LLP
- JoAnn Stonier, Chief Privacy Officer, MasterCard

9:00am

 This panel is approved for 1.5 mandatory continuing legal education (MCLE) credits with California and Pennsylvania and is pending approval for New York and Virginia. An attorney may also count these credits towards her or her New York CLE requirement credit. Please see page 2 of the ILW Program for more information.*

Private International Law: Year in Review

This panel will provide multiple perspectives on important developments of private international law in the past year, including those that arise close in time to International Law Weekend. Presentations will include coverage of recent judicial and other decisions, recent actions on treaties, recent work of intergovernmental organizations, and recent legislation of the European Union. Ample time will be reserved for discussion so that the implications of the new developments may be fully considered by the panel and the audience. The panel will include an academic, an international practitioner, a representative of the European Union, a representative of the Hague Conference on Private International Law, and a representative of the U.S. Department of State.

Moderator:

- Ronald A. Brand, Professor of Law and Director, Center for International Legal Education, University of Pittsburgh School of Law; Member, ABILA Executive Committee

Panelists:

- Charles T. Kotuby Jr., Associate, Jones Day
- Louise Ellen Teitz, First Secretary, Hague Conference on Private International Law; Member, ABILA Executive Committee; Committee Chair, Commercial Dispute Resolution Committee, ABILA
- Karen Vandekerckhove, Team Leader for Civil and Commercial Matters, DG Justice, European Commission

Accounting for Children Affected by Armed Conflicts

Despite the international community's increasing focus on assigning individual responsibility for violations of international law in armed conflict settings, insufficient attention is paid to the children affected by such conflicts. This panel brings together distinguished experts for a moderated dialogue that will assess both current and alternative approaches to securing the rights and well-being of children affected by armed conflict. The dialogue will incorporate relevant perspectives from international human rights law, international criminal law, and international humanitarian law.

Moderator:

- Jonathan Todres, Associate Professor of Law, Georgia State University College of Law

Panelists:

- Diane Marie Amann, Emily & Ernest Woodruff Chair in International Law, University of Georgia School of Law; Special Adviser on Children in and affected by Armed Conflict, International Criminal Court Office of the Prosecutor
- Mark A. Drumbl, Class of 1975 Alumni Professor & Director, Transnational Law Institute, Washington and Lee University School of Law
- Leila Zerrougui, Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, United Nations

American Legal Imperialism? The Explosion in Extraterritorial Application of U.S. Law

Criticism of U.S. "legal imperialism," the imposition of Lex Americana beyond our borders, continues to grow. The U.S. Supreme Court has recently cut back on this trend in Morrison and Kiobel. This panel focuses on two of the most controversial areas of extraterritoriality - the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act. The FCPA now reaches foreign defendants with no jurisdictional nexus to the U.S. other than an email or wire transfer incidentally routed through the U.S. Nine of the ten largest penalties ever extracted from FCPA defendants are from foreign defendants, some with no direct connection to the U.S. These cases involved no judicial oversight and some assert these penalties have been extorted by the Justice Department. Significant, new, and as yet unexplored, post-Morrison developments in the application of RICO will also be considered by our expert panelists.

Moderator:

- Bruce W. Bean, Professor, Michigan State University College of Law; Committee Chair, Extraterritorial Jurisdiction Committee, ABILA

Panelists:

- Thomas Firestone, Of Counsel, Baker & McKenzie; former Resident Legal Advisor, U.S. Embassy in Moscow
- Mike Koehler, Assistant Professor of Law, Southern Illinois University School of Law; Creator, FCPA Professor blog
- Bruce S. Marks, Managing Member, Marks & Sokolov, LLC

Complexities of Regulating the Outer Space Domain by Analogy to Legal Regimes in the Other Four Domains

Activities in the outer space domain are rapidly increasing, both in terms of numbers of countries involved in such activities and the increase in commercial activity beyond satellite-related activities. Human access to the space domain is relatively new, and the space domain may be able to benefit in developing its legal regime by looking to analogies from other long-standing legal regimes for land, air, and maritime. Significant linkages between the even more recent fifth domain of cyber and outer space may also create opportunity of regulation through analogy. However, each domain is unique in its characteristics and the types of activities undertaken, and thus some analogies may not be particularly well-suited or require significant adaptation.

Chair:

- Matthew Schaefer, Professor of Law and Director- Space, Cyber, & Telecom Law LL.M., University of Nebraska College of Law

Panelists:

- Henry Hertzfeld, Research Professor, Elliott School of International Affairs; Space Policy Institute and Adjunct Professor of Law, The George Washington University; Committee Chair, Space Law Committee, ABILA
- Marc Holzapfel, Vice-President and Senior Legal Counsel, Virgin Galactic
- Laura Montgomery, Senior Attorney, Office of General Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration

Combatting Human Trafficking Through International Law

This panel will explore the influence of international law on the various mechanisms established in the United States to combat human trafficking. President Obama has called human trafficking a debasement of our common humanity that tears at the social fabric of our communities, distorts markets, endangers public health, and fuels violence and organized crime. It is in this context that the panel will discuss the enactment of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act, the enactment of state legislation that has led to the creation of task forces and laws and voluntary actions that address corporate social responsibility and the supply chains that contribute to human trafficking.

Co-Chairs:

- E. Christopher Johnson, Director, Graduate Program in Corporate Law and Finance The Thomas M. Cooley Law School
- Anna Williams Shavers, Cline Williams Professor of Citizenship Law, University of Nebraska College of Law

Panelists:

- Nicole Bryan, Director of Corporate Social Responsibility Initiatives, Montclair State University
- Christina Bain, Director of the Program on Human Trafficking and Modern Slavery at the Harvard Kennedy School's Carr Center for Human Rights Policy

In-House Counsel Roundtable

A diverse group of corporate counsel from a wide range of industries will share perspectives on practicing in-house. Panelists will describe their experiences in transitioning from external to internal counsel postings and offer candid insights into the myths and realities of both environments. Audience members will be encouraged to participate actively in the discussion as topics range from the emerging challenges confronting in-house lawyers in a globalized world to the practical considerations of the who, what and why of practicing in-house.

Moderator:

- Steven A. Hammond, Co-Chair, International Practice, Hughes Hubbard & Reed LLP; Member, ABILA Executive Committee

Panelists:

- Barbara Furey, Vice President, Complex Litigation and Records & Information Management, Unum
- Britton Guerrina, Deputy Global General Counsel, PricewaterhouseCoopers International Limited

Rethinking the Rules for Conflict and Competition in Cyberspace

Unfriendly, state-sponsored actions in cyberspace take many forms and implicate a variety of different international and domestic legal frameworks. Many may be subject to the domestic criminal jurisdiction of states (and indistinguishable from various criminal acts), while others may or may not be subject to the Law of Armed Conflict. The exploitation of valuable data by states presents particular challenges for legal classification. This panel will examine evolving cyber threats to governments and businesses and reevaluate the rules that may govern them.

Panelists:

- Jack M. Beard, Assistant Professor of Law, University of Nebraska College of Law
- Duncan B. Hollis, Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and James E. Beasley Professor of Law, Temple University School of Law

Updates & Crisis in European Union Law

The European Union has had a challenging year in 2012. Its Member States and Institutions have faced successive crises in the Euro-Zone as well as governmental instability in some Member States. Strict environmental requirements and the economic crises are some examples of these challenges. Initiatives that enhance gender equality in Corporate Boards have also advanced. Events throughout the European Union affect many aspects of the practice of law in the United States. The panel will discuss current EU issues, including the challenge of finding acceptable solutions to successive EU-Crises, the role of the European Council and its president, Herman Von Rompuy, recent developments in environmental protection law, efforts to achieve common international relations views and efforts to enhance equality. It will also address recent developments in EU crises management operations abroad.

Moderator:

- Elizabeth F. Defeis, Professor of Law, Seton Hall University School of Law

Panelists:

- Roger Goebel, Alpin J. Cameron Professor of Law, Fordham University School of Law
- Hugo Kaufmann, Professor, The Graduate Center, City University of New York
- Gilles Marhic, Head of Legal Section, Delegation of the European Union to the United Nations
- Darren Rosenblum, Professor of Law, Pace Law School
- Bernhard Schima, European Union Fellow, The MacMillan Center at Yale University; Member, Legal Service of the European Commission

Teaching International Law Outside Law Schools

As international law grows ever richer and the current era of globalization deepens trans-border interdependence, the impact of international law is felt across professions and disciplines, reaching into many different kinds of institutions of higher education. Yet analysis and discussion of the pedagogy and substantive content of international law has been focused primarily on law schools. This panel will address substantive and pedagogical aspects of the teaching of international law in a broader array of institutions, including professional and military schools as well as undergraduate colleges.

Chair and Moderator:

- Karen Bravo, Professor of Law and Associate Dean for International Affairs, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law

Panelists:

- Robert Goldstein, Professor of Law and Director for the Center for the Rule of Law, U.S. Military Academy at West Point
- Julia Grignon, Professor at Laval University and President of the Steering Committee of the Jean-Pictet Competition in International Humanitarian Law
- Maria St. Catherine De Grace (Sharpe) McConnell, Founder, President and Director of the Catholic & United Nations World Heritage Institutes for the Study of Vatican/Holy See Pontifical Ecclesiastical Diplomatic Affairs & International Human Rights

International Discovery and Privacy Conflicts

The United States employs the world's most liberal system of discovery in litigation. Relevant material in the possession, custody or control of parties (and third parties) subject to the jurisdiction of a U.S. court, must be produced, absent a showing of undue burden. In many other countries (especially European Union nations) discovery is much more limited, and privacy concerns generally preclude broad disclosure of personal information regarding employees, consumers and business associates. This panel will address the conflict that can arise, when a foreign entity becomes involved in U.S. proceedings, and must produce information subject to privacy restrictions.

Debating the Concept of “Grotian Moments”: Accelerated Formation of Customary International Law During Times of Fundamental Change

Michael Scharf’s “Recognizing Grotian Moments” (Cambridge University Press 2013) posits that radical changes in technology, means of warfare, methods of terrorism, etc., can act as an accelerant, leading to virtually instant formation of customary international law. This panel will discuss and critique the Grotian Moment concept, and its application to various case studies including humanitarian intervention and targeted killing of terrorists. Free copies of Scharf’s book will be provided to the first 100 audience members.

ICTR Referral of International Criminal Cases to National Jurisdictions: Lessons Learned and Best Practices for Closing the Impunity Gap

Over the past 20 years, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) has prosecuted those responsible for the Rwandan Genocide. The scale of the atrocities required national authorities to assume a larger role in prosecuting these crimes. Before this could happen, the ICTR had to ensure that national authorities would prosecute cases in a manner consistent with international fair trial standards. The panel will share lessons learned in the ICTR’s successful referral of international criminal cases to national jurisdictions.

Panelists:

- James J. Arguin, Chief, Appeals and Legal Advisory Division, ICTR Office of the Prosecutor; Vice Chair and Steering Group member, International Criminal Law Committee of the ABA Section of International Law

Who Owns the North Pole? The Rush for Extending Maritime Boundaries in the Arctic

With the continuing melting of the polar ice the area sometimes referred to as the 'High North' has become the object of multinational desire. This panel seeks to discuss the respective riparian Arctic states' claims to extending their maritime boundaries, determining which may have the strongest legal hold on the North Pole and its vicinity. While the provisions of UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) serve as a natural point of departure, the speakers also aim at looking beyond UNCLOS and generally scrutinizing how far limitations to maritime territorial claims may be justified.

The Changing Face of International Family Law: A Roundtable on the Global Future of Same-Sex Marriage

At least 14 countries, five states, the District of Columbia, and five Native American Tribes now recognize same-sex marriage. Additional jurisdictions provide lesser forms of protection through civil unions and domestic partnerships. We will review which jurisdictions protect same-sex couples and what legal documents are essential for same-sex couples when traveling outside their home jurisdictions. We will also review how changes in U.S. federal law now allow immigration rights for same-sex partners. Finally, we will consider whether changes are needed to international family law treaties to cover same-sex couples.

Standards of Review in Investment Arbitration: Reviewing State Regulatory Conduct Under International Law

It is now common for international tribunals to review the legality of the domestic regulatory actions of governments. International human rights tribunals assess whether state actions have violated human rights. WTO tribunals assess whether state regulations have breached international trade obligations. And international investment arbitration often reviews the actions of states in relation to their impact on foreign investors. This panel will consider the applicable standard of review that an international investment tribunal will apply to assessing the legality of a state's conduct when regulating in the public interest. While focusing on international investment law, the panelists will also consider the standards of review adopted by other international tribunals in similar contexts.

Reform of the Inter-American Human Rights System

Some Organization of American States (OAS) member states complained about the unfairness of three levels of obligations undertaken by member states: 1) states parties to the American Convention that accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, 2) states parties to the American Convention that have not accepted the Court's jurisdiction and 3) states that have accepted neither the Convention nor the Court. Since the U.S. is in the third group there was talk about moving the system to Latin America and not electing Americans. What happened?

Conflict Minerals and International Business: National & International Responses

Reminiscent of "blood diamonds," these minerals, mined in areas of conflict and human rights abuses, are funding violence and armed conflict. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is establishing disclosure rules about their use. The European Union is also considering a regime for conflict minerals. In the U.S., the SEC's efforts have created controversy, generating legal challenges from trade groups. The panel will discuss these challenges and explore the need for an international regime.

Influence of National Law on Multilateral Development Bank Sanctions Systems

This session will examine the ways in which multilateral development banks (MDBs) draw on various national legal systems to inform both procedural and substantive norms within their sanctions systems, in the process creating what is arguably a new area of international administrative law. The session will also consider the hybrid nature of these systems and how, over time, the publication of sanctions decisions may lead to a 'cross-fertilization' of norms and even a coherent body of 'MDB sanctions law'.

Web War 3.0 - The Conflicts over International Internet Governance, Monitoring and Transparency

There is an emerging conflict over the international governance of cyberspace. Most western nations prefer the existing multi-stakeholder approach to governance, but other nations want to assert greater control, perhaps through the International Telecommunications Union. New dimensions to this conflict emerged with the revelations of National Security Agency monitoring and the international responses to the Snowden affair. These developments have implications for all users -- from insurgents and hacktivists to businesses and consumers.

Prosecuting Heads of State at the ICC: Bashir and Kenyatta

The International Criminal Court stands poised to go into uncharted territory: trying at least one current head of state, and potentially, two, in The Hague, Netherlands. Will these trials of sitting presidents actually proceed? Is it feasible to try a current head of state? How will Sudanese President Bashir be apprehended, if at all? This panel will explore these and related issues, drawing from past experiences, including the apprehension and trial of former Liberian President Charles Taylor.

Do We Need Investment Treaties?

Given the explosion of arbitrations filed under bilateral investment treaties (BITs) in recent decades, some question the effectiveness or necessity of the system on a grand scale (more than 2,500 BITs are in force today). Others rebut that without such a system, in our modern age investors would be left subject to the whim of local courts and authorities (often with repercussions that spread cross-border before any real opportunity to remedy the problem within the host State presents itself). Important developments in investment cases in recent years, including the Chevron and Yukos matters, raise the question of whether BITs are providing requisite protections to investors and States, both with respect to form and scale.

The Globalization of Child Rights and Remedies

This panel is sponsored by ABILA's International Human Rights Committee. Among the least developed and observed of all human rights are children's rights. Although private actors may significantly impair the enjoyment of any human rights, the traditional primary threat to most adult human rights is the state itself. Children's rights, in contrast, face pervasive threats from private actors as well as the state, including parents and guardians, who do not always fulfill, and may actively subvert, child rights. This panel will explore the globalization of children's rights in a world public order delegating formal enforcement to states, which in turn tend to delegate primary responsibility for protecting and enforcing child rights to largely unregulated private actors. In particular, the panel will explore the dynamics of national enforcement of international child rights and the current and ideal roles of public and private advocates.

Thinking Ahead: Six Questions to Ask at the Beginning of An International Arbitration

This panel will focus on six strategic questions that should be asked at the beginning of any international arbitration, including: what personal traits to look for in an arbitrator; whether it is necessary to seek preliminary injunctive relief from the courts; whether it is possible to bifurcate and seek the dismissal of claims; specific documents do you need to prove your client's claims/defenses; whether you need (and can) obtain third-party discovery; and whether will you be able to enforce and collect an arbitration award. By honestly answering these questions before you get too deep into an international arbitration, you will help to avoid unexpected pitfalls in the arbitral process, save legal fees and increase your chances of ultimate victory.

Standards of Responsibility for International Organizations: The Case of Haiti's Cholera Epidemic

In 2011, the U.N. International Law Commission completed its work on "draft articles on the responsibility of international organizations." The potential application of those principles to the tragedy in Haiti has been a topic of great interest in the human rights community and the hallways of the United Nations. It is alleged that UN peacekeepers inadvertently but negligently caused the outbreak of a virulent cholera epidemic in Haiti in 2011 that killed several thousand people and has infected thousands more. How should the principles of responsibility apply in this case? And why has the organization not established a claims commission? Can a remedy be adequate if it is in the form of international aid en masse, but fails to compensate the most direly affected families? What implications does this case have for the future of UN peacekeeping?

Careers in Advising Small- to Medium-Sized Foreign Companies - Part I

This panel will focus on career opportunities in representing medium-sized foreign corporate clients and individuals. Assisting such clients often requires a lawyer to be knowledgeable about a broad array of issues because such clients may be reluctant to retain multiple law firms and they may not have needs typically addressed by highly specialized counsel. Among the clients in this group are those making acquisitions in the U.S. for the first time, those unfamiliar with the world of U.S. tariffs and customs, and those at the early stage of developing product distribution strategies. The panel will focus on the skills and knowledge needed to work with a client base that often is looking for a mixture of advice: legal, business, and cultural.

Careers in International Art Law - Part I

Like many human activities, the art world is becoming increasingly international. Works of art regularly travel across borders in connection with exhibitions. These works also travel across borders in connection with theft, looting, and trafficking. Today, art is sold and distributed via the Internet and other transnational media in ways not imagined just decades ago. These phenomena and others have created the need for lawyers specialized in forms of licensing, contracting, and dispute resolution particular to the art world. The panel will explore career paths for lawyers interested in wedding a legal career to their passion for the arts -- careers in private law firms, in museums, in government, and in international bodies.
